Marquita Moss is a dual, board-certified Family Nurse Practitioner with over 13 years of nursing experience. Her experience includes LTAC, PCU, Med-Surg, and Travel Nursing. Marquita initially obtained her associate degree in nursing from Central Carolina Technical College. She then went on to earn both her undergraduate, and graduate degrees from Claflin University in Orangeburg, SC. She is currently pursuing her doctoral degree from the University of North Carolina Greensboro, and has plans to open a primary care facility in her hometown of Martinsville, VA.

Throughout her journey, Marquita has made significant contributions to the community, emphasizing accessible care and patient education. She is an active member of several professional organizations to include the National Black Nurse Practitioner Association, American Academy of Nurse Practitioners, American Nurses Association, The National Society of Leadership and Success, and Sigma Theta Tau International Honor Society, Her involvement reflects her commitment to advancing the nursing profession, fostering leadership, and advocating for health equity.

Marquita states, "Nursing, and healthcare overall have changed drastically over the years. My love for patient advocacy, and the passion that I have for addressing the needs of the most vulnerable individuals in our communities to ensure health equality, is what keeps me motivated"

Currently, Marquita is working as a locums tenet Nurse Practitioner, and works per diem for United Health Group, completing in-home wellness visits. She states that she is "looking forward to welcoming the next generation of nurses".

Robert Reid, MSN, APRN, FNP-C, FNP-BC

Robert Reid is a dedicated healthcare professional with over 21 years of experience, blending hands-on clinical care with innovative healthcare technology. His nursing journey began at the University of South Carolina Upstate, where he earned his Associate and Bachelor of Science in Nursing degrees. He later advanced his education with a Master of Science in Nursing (MSN) specializing in Health Care Systems Management from Loyola University New Orleans, followed by a Post-Master's Certificate in Family Nurse Practitioner studies at Duke University.

Robert's commitment to excellence led him to complete a Nurse Practitioner Residency at the Durham VA Medical Center in partnership with Duke University. There, he developed the expertise to manage complex healthcare needs while serving veterans—a population he holds in the highest regard.

Robert's love for nursing stems from his desire to help people and make a meaningful impact. What he didn't realize when he started was just how diverse and rewarding a career in nursing could be. From working in hospitals and clinics to teaching nursing students, traveling, and even contributing to healthcare information technology, Robert's career has been anything but ordinary.

"Nursing is incredible because it allows you to grow, learn, and make a real difference," Robert says. "No two days are the same, and the opportunities to explore your passions are endless."

Today, Robert is excited to share his journey with you and inspire the next generation of healthcare professionals. Whether you're interested in patient care, leadership, or innovative solutions, nursing offers a path to make a difference in the world—and in people's lives.
